

Hampshire and Isle of Wight Strategic Migration Group Terms of Reference

Introduction

The South East hosts the largest number of migrants outside of London (12% of the national total). Migrants here represent a large and diverse population; the size and nature being influenced by economic and geopolitical events.

In order to fully understand migration and the impact, the region this partnership has been broken down into four 'bite-sized' sub regions of which Hampshire and Isle of Wight is one with the others being Thames Valley, Sussex and Surrey and Kent.

The South East Strategic Partnership for Migration (SESPM) is grant funded by the Home Office to provide a strategic leadership, advisory and coordination functions for migration in the South East. The core areas of work include the accommodation and support arrangements for asylum seekers and refugees, coordinating the South East regions participation in the refugee Vulnerable Persons Resettlement Programmes, coordinating the National Transfer Scheme for Unaccompanied Asylum Seeking Children and identifying and addressing regional migration priorities.

Purpose

Bringing together a multi-agency forum for strategic and senior operational professionals in the area to consider and respond to key migration issues at the local level.

Communication: sub –regional Strategic Migration groups (SMGs) provide a two way communication vehicle to connect central policy and decision making with the experience and impact of migration at the local level.

Influence and Inform: sub-regional SMGs will identify key impacts, challenges, benefits and best practice relating to migration to influence and inform national and local migration policy and decision making including for example housing, health, education, employment, integration and community safety and to identify areas for policy and service development.
